Dude perfect summer tour 2019

After the release of his career retrospective documentary A Head Full Of Dreams, it seems that Coldplay is back in the collective consciousness of Britain. After watching the band's journey from melancholy to kaleidoscopic optimism, it's only natural to wonder whether Coldplay will be at Glastonbury 2019, and whether they will bring their now-branded bright flair to the Somerset fields. While it's possible, it doesn't look very likely. When asked what this year's line-up could bring to the 2018 NME Awards, festival co-creator Michael Eavis hinted to Radio 1 that there would be two or three acts that had never played a headliner slot before. This kinda pushes Coldplay away from voting as they headlin Glastonbury four times, more than any other act at the festival according to the BBC. I have reached out to a representative of the group to clarify whether there is a possibility of appearing at the festival, but have not yet received a comment. As long as the headliners and line-up are fully confirmed (which is usually announced in April before reselling tickets) or the band says otherwise, I wouldn't completely ignore the possibility of the band climbing on Glasto just yet. Especially since there are rumours that Coldplay are planning a 2019 festival tour that could easily include the Somerset Festival on the roster. Ian Gavan/Getty Images Entertainment/Getty Images Agreed with Festi Leaks, this could include the O Son Do Camin'o Festival in the Spanish city of Santiago de Compostela, the Rock in Roma Summer Festival in the Italian capital, and the Slane concert at The Slane Castle by Lord Henry Mountcharles near Dublin. Such a tour makes sense, as the band has not released new material since the release of A Head Full Of Dreams in 2015, which was supported by a global tour between 2016 and 2017. It may be some time until some announcement is made regarding the appearance of Glasto, but that hasn't stopped a few rumors circulating as other artists may be topping the festival bill. Stormzy was the first headliner to be confirmed last November after posters were displayed in Oxfam storefronts around the centre of Glastonbury and the Streatham area of south London, which is close to where the rapper was raised. It will be Stormzy's first headliner slot at the festival as he previously played Sonic Tent in 2016 and on another stage in 2017, which supports Ivsi's previous hints. Matt Cardy/Getty Images Entertainment/Getty ImagesKylie Minogue and Janelle Monae are also confirmed for the festival, playing the Legend Slot and West Holts stage respectively. While April isn't that far away, it hasn't stopped the rumor mill spinning as to who else might be the headliner. According to Betway, it seems as though the cure and killers are completing headlining slots as their odds are quite high. The Cure is no strangers at the Somerset Festival and we make them 2/5 favourites It's again, with the market offering Killers on 8/11 likely to join them, Betway's Alan Alger said in a statement to NME. It looks like the rest of the headliners will be bands with Strokes (100/30), Fleetwood Mac (9/2), and Led Zeppelin (5/1) all prominently on the market and you have to go down to Lady Gaga at 7/1 to find a soloist with a chance. At least you don't have to wait long until everything is revealed. Who knows, maybe Coldplay will surprise everyone? You may not be thinking about your summer trip just yet, but other people. If you plan to visit the national park this summer, book a tour now. Excursions can add a lot to your experience, especially if you don't have time to explore on your own. Rangers and park guides are often very knowledgeable about the history of the park and its attractions. You can book tours either through the park's website or by calling them. Love the way they lie? You can potentially hear that super catchy song live, since Rihanna and Eminem are teaming up for the tour, which most likely consists of some seriously powerhouse performances. Monster Tou r will be a mini tour that takes off this summer, and by mini we mean mini. The tour will make only three stops: Los Angeles, New York and Detroit, which means stadiums are probably packed and tickets are likely to sell quickly and go at fairly high prices. But locals and people to travel to these cities need gear, as it's a shot to fix Rihanna and Eminem! The two most recently teamed up for the single The Monster, which is off em's latest album, Marshall Mathers LP 2. The single (which features an awesome video that you should check out below) follows their hugely successful hit from 2010, Love How You Lie. Eminem is currently on the road with his Rapture Tour, and Rihanna rounded out her Diamonds World Tour last year, so it was a busy time for both of them. Rihanna is pretty psyched for it, too. She recently tweeted: @Eminem: NYC/DETLA this August @Rihanna! #TheMonsterTour - s OH IM TAM!!!!!! We've all been there before: bouncing along on a sightseeing bus, shoehorned into the seat, sights flying past at the speed of a moving car. You try to photograph the sights, but end up capturing your own reflection in the window. You try to stay awake, but the rhythm of the road dulls your brain like Ambien. You try to make the best of it, but can't - other travelers in your group won't stop snoring, jostling, chatting, whimpering. Blame the tour, not you. Simply put, you have no place on the bus or in the middle of the herd. You're a researcher, not a pack of animals. To find which lifts the rot of sightseeing in a monumental adventure, grab a virtual shovel and start digging. Dig. With websites of tourist offices; indie ideas lurk among more ordinary information. For example, New Zealand.com lists arttay where you can learn pottery and painting from local artists in Auckland, while VisitBerlin.de well presents his edgy city with bike and brewery tours. Creative wanderers should ShawGuides.com whose lists tend to be art and the world. ToursByLocals.com offers exactly what the name suggests - individually led tours from local experts to everything from Norwegian Vikings to Jewish heritage in Buenos Aires. To help you get started, we've put together eight tours around the world that break out of the crowd and veer off in unexpected and intriguing directions. China, one of the most popular tourist destinations on the planet, is the Land of Dragons and Group Tours. But you can avoid the sea of colored visors by wandering the Great Wall, which stretches for thousands of miles. With the Great Wall Adventure Club, you can spend the day putting your foot to the stone on any of the 15 routes. Or take an extra day (or a dozen) and follow the ancient fortifications to an area wild with mountains, lakes and fields of wildflowers. Come at night, arrange your sleeping mechanism inside one of the dramatic guard exhausts. From this point of view, the only crowd you see stars piled up in the sky. To fully explore Prince Edward Island, you'll need the freedom to stop on a whim, say, for a plate of raw oysters in Charlottetown or to take a nap on the white sands of Panmuir Island. One of the most liberated types of travel is the bike, especially when the tour operator hallway. PEI-based Macqueen does all the hard work on its supported independent tour cycle. The sketcher from the route (with plenty of wiggle room), organizes home rooms (BCBs and hotels), tows equipment and provides emergency assistance on the side of the road. The five to seven-night trip offers plenty of excuses to jump off your saddle, such as East Point Lighthouse, the sand dunes of Greenwich National Park, cultural mussel farms and singing (squeaky) pool head sands. Your only job is to pedal, pedal... And the coast. The llamas are built to carry bags, not to ride like ponies. But you want to use your own feet anyway on the invigorating trail of Peru from Alleros to Chavin de Huantar, to an Ican archaeological dig almost 10,500 feet high. On a three-day llama trek organized by RESPONSible Travel Peru, your tourist troupe will hoof its mountains, down valleys and through peasant villages. Along the way you will soak up Andean culture, from food and music to the tradition of using llamas as luggage carts. At night, mammals without built-in fur blankets will sleep in tents; those with the isolation of being outdoors. At the end of a 23-mile adventure, be sure to tip a woolly guide with carrots or Grass. One in Paris, an unprepared buyer may end up with gauche picks or poorly translated Russo. Mon Dieu! It is best to call experts. Antiques Diva and Co. helps visitors navigate the warrens of flea markets and the vast majority of quality shops, in addition to such local haunts as vide-greniers (attic sales) and brocantes (travel antique fairs). The company is owned by an American expat who once scored a Louis XV-style dresser worth eight times what she paid for it. Half-full-day tours are led by professional stylists and adapted to your fantasies, whether for chandeliers worthy of Versailles, Chanel hand-me-downs or the perfect French scarf. Sing loud and proud during a tour of the Harlem Gospel in New York. Harlem Spiritual hits such high notes as Sugar Hill Neighborhood, home of musical legends like Duke Ellington; the pioneering Cotton Club and the Apollo Theatre; and the Schomburg Center for Black Culture Studies. Wednesday's tour ends with a flourish. An Hour of Power Gospel Service, performed by the ARC Choir, which helps support drug addicts' rehabilitation center. On Sundays, don pearls and the best church hats for the gospel service are followed by brunch, which feeds more than just your soul. Cape Town life centers on its harbor, so don't just stand there on the shore - get out on the water. Waterfront Boat organizes various sailing tours that remain at sea until the day calls it at night. A 90-minute sunset trip, with an extra glass of sparkling, cruises Table Bay during the magical hour of sea twilight (when the sun falls 12 degrees below the horizon). Council Spirit of Victoria, a 58-foot gaff-rigged schooner, and sail off to Milneron Lighthouse and Grainger Bay, in the shadow of Table Mountain. On tapas twirl through Madrid, you won't stop chewing until the last plate is cleared from the table. A walk of Spain tour leads bellies on the evening scanning four tapas restaurants and taverns. Guests sample at least six small plates of traditional fare such as chorizo and spinach croquettes. To quench his thirst, the native guide, a member of the Spanish Wine Tasting Association (he enviably tests hundreds of wines a year), connects food with a handful of liquid love matches. Before you leave the table, make sure you don't leave anything behind, such as that artisan blue cheese bite or a sip of Pedro Ximenez. The young guides who captain Salam Baalak Trust City Walk know the road Paharganj closely; they grew up as citizens of the sandy streets of New Delhi. However, with the help of the non-profit Salaam Baalak Trust, these children have found refuge and opportunities, some as trained guides. On the tour, guests follow their leader through the back alleys lined with recycling shops, temples and a pottery market. The comment was bombarded with personal stories of struggle and survival. The walk ends next to one of the trust's facilities, which is open to visitors interested in observing the rescued children's classrooms and These These helps support the organization and shape future tour guides - or just futures.
